

SUPPORTING ENTERPRISE TRANSFORMATION

Workplace learning is a key strategy that we are pursuing as it allows workers to upskill in-situ and on the job, minimising operational disruption to companies and workers.”

The National Centre of Excellence for Workplace Learning (NACE) will partner NTUC to pilot the Workplace Skills Recognition (WPSR) Programme to equip SMEs with the capabilities to conduct workplace learning.

Workers and employers in the Progressive Wage Model sectors can benefit significantly from such an initiative. SkillsFuture Singapore (SSG) and NTUC will start this pilot with SMEs in two PWM sectors — retail and food services.”

“

We will need to do more at the industry-level to coordinate training and placement efforts in sectors that are less regulated and have more SMEs.

SSG, together with Workforce Singapore, Enterprise Singapore and Economic Development Board will pilot Jobs-Skills Integrators (JSITs) in three sectors — Precision Engineering, Wholesale Trade and Retail. We will appoint suitable intermediaries such as industry associations, employment agencies and Institutes of Higher Learning as JSITs.”

“

We must have a continuing, active conversation across different stakeholders on the skills that are needed, which types of training are helpful and impactful, and where the gaps might be. Strengthening the impact of the SkillsFuture movement is a collective effort, and we must join hands on it, to succeed.”
